

Abstract

A method for enabling useful data, in particular navigation data, which are stored on a data carrier or transmitted into a data processing system. The object is to provide the user with an optimized data provision method. For this purpose, the data are 5 enabled for an area that is freely selectable by the user of the useful data.